The lion decided to go to the old owl for advice. The following dialogue is between the Lion (L) and the Owl (O).

O: Welcome, dear lion. What brought you here?

L: I am in a big dilemma, and only your wisdom can get me out of it.

O: Well, I appreciate your confidence in my knowledge. So, tell me.

L: I am in love with a fish, and I want to marry her.

O: Have you considered the consequences of your decision?

L: Definitely! I am well aware that I will lose my position as the king of the beasts. The tigers will take over the jungle. My family will abandon me, and worst of all, my mother will disown me.

O: I am pleased to hear that you know what you are doing. However, there is one thing that I feel you have not taken into consideration.

L: What is it? Please tell me. I am all ears.

O: A lion is a mammal. They have lungs to breathe on land. However, fish have gills to breathe in water. This marriage is impossible because it will cause the death of one of you. You can not live together.

L: You've got a point there. So I have to decide between love and life.

O: You are absolutely right. Now go home and think it over. If you want to be with your love, one of you must die.
